

AMENDMENTS TO THE ABSTRACT

Replace the Abstract with:

A gray level compensation mechanism is proposed for flexible displays. Flexible displays exhibit cell gap variations upon bending. The cell gap is measured during operation of the display (capacitive, piezoelectric~~piezoelectric~~). The pixel voltage is adjusted according to the measured cell gap. This results in a gray level that is independent of the local bending radius.